Another Progressive Step of the Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc.

Gratifying reports of improvement in the health and mortality ratings of colored people are frequently noted in the press, but seldom, if ever, is there any credit given the Negro Fraternals, Industrial Sick Benefit, Industrial Life and Ordinary Life Insurance Companies for this commendable race progress.

These race institutions by providing during periods of illness or other disability, weekly cash benefits, and by paying promptly death claims following the death of policyholders, and by giving healthful and gainful employment to thousands of colored men and women, have been potent factors in lowering the sick and death rates of the race. In fact, they have made it possible for the humblest as well as the more fortunate homes to have proper medical attention, hospital service when needed, proper food and care during periods of illness and disability, thereby materially reducing the periods and frequency of illness and disability and consequently prolonging the lives of thousands of race people. Then, too, the better incomes provided by the employment offered by these institutions have contributed much to the improvement of the home life, health and well-being of the colored people.

The Southern Aid Society of Virginia, Inc., was among the pioneers in these health conservation measures, and is pleased to announce that on account of the improvement in the health and mortality status of the race, it will issue, beginning July 2, 1928, a more liberal Policy Contract, providing, for One Small Premium, protection against Sickness, Accident and Death.

WE PAY OUR CLAIMS

A S a present or prospective policyholder you may be interested to know that this Company pays its claims "with commendable promptness." The following is the record of claims paid since the Company began business in March, 1924:

RECORD OF CLAIMS PAID

Year of Payment	Ordinary Claims	Industrial Claims	Total Paid
1924	$4,500.00	none	$4,500.00
1925	1,020.00		1,020.00
1926	7,469.01	$835.00	8,304.01
1927	23,264.17	5,240.00	28,504.17
1928 to June 30	26,550.10	2,327.33	28,877.43
TOTAL	$62,803.28	$8,402.33	$71,205.61

Premiums received by the Company from these policyholders amounted to a little more than $4,500.00.

The report of examination of the Company by the Illinois Insurance Department, dated April 30th, 1928, has the following statement which we do not object to you reading without any abbreviation in the copy:

"During the period covered by this examination the Company has contested or settled by compromise four claims totaling $3,500.00. Your examiners reviewed each of these claim files, as well as those of numerous other death losses incurred during the same period. In each case the Company's action was fully justified by the facts as disclosed by the proofs of loss in file. It may be said further that the Company's claim settlements are made with commendable promptness and observance of policy provisions."

We are rather glad of the opportunity, after four short years, to report to you an established record for good faith in the payment of claims. This record can have more than casual interest for you in the development of plans which you do not wish to have interrupted by death or other unforseen circumstances. Give full name, occupation, and date of birth in writing the Home Office.

WHAT is a political campaign? Hear what the High School Teacher says: "There are in all governments various questions of policy. They fall into two main categories and there are two parties which advocate them called Conservatives and Liberals or Rights and Lefts or Republicans and Democrats. In a campaign the chosen candidates of these parties discuss by articles, speeches and radio, the chief questions of political policy and the answers of their own party."— Thus speaks the Teacher and what she says ain't so.—There are a dozen questions fronting modern nations and they can't be crammed into two main categories.—Hence the Third parties and blocs and cartels and groups in every legislature.—Hence the frenzied effort of politicians to stop discussion, choke revolt, and penalize difference of opinion.—The only difference between Republicans and Democrats is the difference between the individuals who will draw the salaries and distribute economic privileges for the next four years.—A political campaign is an organized effort to stop discussion by the use of money or promises of profit.-Money is used for bribes and propaganda.-Propaganda is expert knowledge and use of human psychology.-Don't talk tariff but say that Hoover had a sweet temper as a boy and once gave a poor old man ten cents-tell how Smith loved his Mother and cherishes her bible-and so on. Blah! Poppycock! Flapdoodle!-Or sling mud. Intimate that Hower is an Irish-hating cockney—whisper that Curtis is a Nigger (the Kansas Indians are dark and mixed) and jeer at Smith's grammar.—Dirt! Mud! Hate! Prejudice!-And Money. Get money. Beg money. Steal money. Hold up Oil and Corporations. Stampede employers. Scare employees.— Pay bribes for influence and votes and newspapers by all methods that avoid the law, remembering that Money can always avoid the law.-Use names and suspicions and innuendo: Bolshevick! Socialist! Radical! Pacifist! Traitor! -Win the election by any and all means except the discussion of the poverty of farmers, the disfranchisement of Negroes, the taxation of the poor, the ownership of railways and waterfalls, the immunity and privilege of the rich, the horror and cost of war.—Hooray! The election! Bildab wins! The country is safe for all its Sinclairs, Phillipses, Falls, Connellys, Stewarts and their ilk. The biggest campaign chest is triumphant.— Hooray and again Hooray and down with Russia, Mexico, Haiti, Nicaragua and China. Up with Hell!— Don't you like this! Well, who's to blame?-The teams are at the stake. Smith and Robinson stand for Liquor and Lynching, Disfranchisement and Jim-crowism. — Hoover and Curtis stand for Lilly-Whitism, Segregation and to Hell with Haiti.-Farmers will have their property irrigated with oil. -Drys will be wet with the Queensboro sewer.-The slogan for both parties will be "Hee-Haw!"-Moral: Vote for Norman Thomas.

As the Crow Flies

HOWARD and the State schools in lieu of endowment, have a government appropriation. Lincoln has begun a campaign for an additional endowment of $500,000, one-half of which has been pledged conditionally by the General Education Board. Talladega has a campaign for $1,000,000, of which the General Education Board has pledged one-half, and also, the Board has made a donation toward teacher salaries for three years. Morehouse College has begun an endowment campaign for $600,000 to be raised in three years. The General Education both of which refuse to give our application serious consideration. We have also applied to the North Central Association, but they refuse to enter the territory of any other accrediting agency, therefore, we have been unable to get any action there. We are at present knocking at the door of the Association of American Universities. I am hopeful that we may get some results by their next meeting in November."

Many of the colleges are recognized and rated by the Department of Education, especially that of North Caro-

Board has pledged half of this if the total is raised. Smaller campaigns for building an endowment have been inaugurated at Paine, Lane and some other schools. There is considerable difficulty in securing recognition for Southern Negro colleges from the Standard College Associations. The Southern Association refuses to recognize Negro high schools or colleges apparently under any circumstances. One prominent Negro instituiton writes as follows:

"In reference to the rating of—University, I regret to say that our geographical locations seems to hinder us considerably in this matter. The——State Department of Education does, of course, rate us as "A" class. We have not made any effort to be rated by any other state except New York State and they have not seen fit as yet to give us full rating. We have made application to the——State College Association and to the Southern Association of Colleges of Secondary Schools,

THE general attitude of these colleges may be indicated by extracts from their reports. There are still colleges which have never had Negro students. This is true of Princeton, Lehigh and several others. Vassar had one student of Negro descent in the past unknowingly, and has never admitted another. Bryn Mawr has broken her long record and has at present two colored students, one undergraduate and one in the graduate school. Barnard has one student.

Most of the institutions that write on the subject say that they make no discrimination. For instance:

Armour Institute:

"We accept them on the same basis as any other students. It seems, though, that few of them succeed in continuing their work to the end."

Iowa Wesleyan:

"We have no such students here. We should be glad, however, to enroll them if students of real ability and promise applied."

College of the City of New York:

In regard to your fourth inquiry, let me say that the College treats Negro students on precisely the same basis as all others, making no distinction of any sort for or against any student because of his race."

University of Pennsylvania:

"The University has no special policy toward Negro students. It has accepted all who have been able to satisfy the entrance requirements and has continued them toward graduation as long as they continue to meet the scholastic requirements of the different faculties. There is no color distinction whatsoever."

Pennsylvania State College:

"We cannot admit young colored women. Are glad to admit Pennsylvania colored boys."

Brown University:

"We have no special policy toward Negro students. In fact, we have very few here, and they are usually high grade students."

CRISIS

"As far as I can now see, we have no contemplated change of policy toward Negro students, who are received on their merits as other students are."

Temple University:

"May I say, in reference to the last paragraph of your letter, that Temple University has never made any distinction between its students because of race or religion, and that it does not intend to change this policy."

Purdue University:

"The University has no special policy relative to Negro students. They enroll in the University and participate in the class exercises the same as any other group of students. From all that I can see, the colored students come and go on the Purdue campus with equal rights and privileges."

University of Illinois:

"The University makes no distinction or discrimination in its attitude or treatment of its students regarding their color or race, hence it has no policy towards Negro students other than that towards all of its students."

Des Moines University:

"We have no special policy toward Negro students. They are admitted to our classes on the same basis as any other students and are treated in the same manner and we have found our students very democratic and sociable with the Negro students."

Illinois Wesleyan University:

"No prejudice so far as I know."
DePauw University:

"We have no particular policy at De-Pauw; no race or color distinction is made, hence none who applies and is able to pay for an education is turned away."

New York University:

"I know of no special policy of the University, nor of any contemplated policy affecting Negro students, or students of any other race or color, as a class or group. The administrative officers of the University and of the different colleges and schools, and the faculty advisers, in the exercise of their functions are free to confer with the individual student and to offer such advice as in their judgment may lead to the best progress and greatest happiness of the student in the preparation for his future work."

Simmons College:

"No discrimination whatever."

NoT all of these allegations are quite as true as they seem. Temple University, for instance, refuses to admit colored students to certain courses. New York University refuses to admit girls to the Physical Training Course and discriminates sometimes in other ways. There is much discrimination, of course, at the University of Illinois and some at the University of Pennsylvania. Some of the institutions admit discrimination.

Oberlin says, for instance:

"We have not changed our policy in regard to Negro students, and do not anticipate doing so in the near future so far as I know. Negro students are admitted to all classrooms and laboratories on exactly the same basis as white students."

This means that colored students have difficulty in getting rooms in dormitories, which is a serious difficulty in a small town.

Wesleyan of Connecticut says frankly:

"We have no special policy toward Negro students. We treat them like everyone else. Of course, we have to make arrangements sometimes regarding rooming in the dormitories, but it has always been possible to do so without trouble and we do not find any friction on the part of our students toward mem—

THERE is a house wren jingling little bells just a few rods away from here. The busy little song reminds me of an interesting discovery that I made one day. Father House Wren was on the edge of the barn door darting about like a little brown mouse and chirping quickly. Then he adjusted himself somewhat under the eaves and began to sing. Head thrown back and throat swelling he sent the clear eager notes from his open mouth.

After listening for some time I decided to look inside the barn for Jenny Wren. I thought there must be eggs or infant Wrens hidden in a nearby nest, and the Wren folks were always flashing in and out of the barn. So I went to look.

F course it was there. But how Mother Wren scolded me for climbing up to pry into her nest! Mother Robin and Mother Morning Dove fly away when people come to their nests, but not so little Jenny Wren. She seemed to cry in her hurried chuck-chucks, "You busybody, busybody! Shame!" And then she called to Father Wren and together they rushed about on the rafters, little wings fluttering. Father Wren soon flew out again and left it to Jenny Wren. Head held down and emphatically forward, upright tail twitching she fretted about the barn while I looked at the nest in the crev-

It was made of little dry twigs and stems and a pine sprig minus needles. There were white feathers standing up conspicuously within. They looked much too large and plentiful for the little nest. How disappointing it was to realize that I could not look down into it. What was there? A feather moved in the slightest way as though some fairy had sighed.

"A baby wren must have moved that," I thought, and waited. One tiny yellow beak looked up, then another. How could Mother Wren have dreamed that any one would touch such marvelous toys as little birds?

ON THE PELICAN'S BACK

S NOWDOWN was a pelican. He was bathing his large flat feet in a stream one day and saw reflected in the water something that looked like a cloud or a cluster of lotus blooms. It was Snowdown himself, lily white.

"How can I attract attention to myself?" he asked.

But the water remained silent.

"I think I shall give a concert. And since I like my shadow so well, I shall insist that all birds taking part on the program shall be white as I am. Good. A concert!" cried Snowdown loudly. "Come and get on my back. The program will begin."

"Yes," replied buoyant Baltimore Oriole poking his jetty head through the reeds, "I am ready."

S NOWDOWN peered at him in-differently and waddled slightly away. "Sorry, but you cannot be away. used."

"What about me?" piped a Snow Bunting that was en route to Spitzbergen for the summer.

"Very good." Snowdown nodded at the chubby white bunting that seated himself on the pelican's back.

"Concert!" announced the pelican

"May I come?" cried Father Robin blithely as he overheard the call while Mrs. Robin and the babies were out for a walk.

"Let's see. No," croaked Snowdown, "you won't do for my program." Robin tossed his proud black head and sped away.

"Concert!" shrieked Snowdown loudly, and the snow bunting helped this time.

"May I participate?" asked a superb peacock from India. He spread his snowy tail like a bride's veil on the grass, then lifted it like a fan. His ghost-white feathers looked almost transparent. "I cannot get on your back," said he. "But I can act as usher."

"Excellent!" the pelican cried. "Concert!" Again the call rang through the grove. .

TP came a gay bobolink. "I'll take part," he declared.

But Snowdown did not reply. And dashing Robert of Lincoln with his dark head and stunning black outfit darted off.

Meadowlark and Brown Thrasher and some Thrushes and the dainty Wood Pewee, a Bluebird, a Cardinal -all of these came.

But a Ptarmigan flew up and was accepted instead. So the little dark-headed Bluebirds, the brown birds and all those others flew off. For they were not white like the pelican and the snow bunting and the Indian peacock and the snowy heron and the Arctic owl and the ptarmigan.

"Let us have our own concert," brightly suggested Cardinal as they landed together near a stream. "Let us call the other birds."

And back came Sir Oriole with his jetty face and Bobolink and Robin and Catbird. Together they all sang. Even the aspen leaves paused in their quivering. The little brooks stood still. Then the woods shook with wonder at that marvelous melody.

"Now you sing," cried black Bobolink to the pelican and the Indian peacock and the ptarmigan and the bunt-"Where is ing and the Artic owl. your concert?"

CRISIS

"They have come up from slavery to be prominent in education, the professions, art, science, agriculture, banking, and commerce. It is estimated that 50,000 of them are on the Government pay rolls, drawing about $50,000,000 each year. They have been the recipients of presidential appointments and their professional ability has arisen to a sufficiently high plane so that they have been intrusted with the entire management and control of the great Veterans' Hospital at Tuskegee, where their conduct has taken high rank."

Dr. Du Bois spoke of disfranchisement:

"The barring of Negroes from the polls in the South," said Dr. Du Bois, "encourages oligarchy. It enables cliques to nullify not simply the 14th and 15th Amendments but the 19th, giving the right to vote to women. And, finally, it entirely vitiates the normal distribution of voting power throughout the nation.

"It accomplishes this not simply by disfranchising Negroes. The population in Southern states has doubled and by reason of woman suffrage the voting population ought to have quadrupled; but actually, as a matter of fact, the voting population has increased less than 50 per cent, showing that not only have two million Negroes been disfranchised but more than two million whites."

And all through the meeting Los Angeles sang.

Thursday there were business sessions to discuss the branches and methods of support. On Thursday night, with Dr. Somerville presiding, a Jewish Rabbi, Rudolph Coffee, spoke of minorities.

"America is infinitely richer because of Paul Laurence Dunbar, Roland Hayes and Florence Mills. How much poorer would America be if we never had your magnificent contribution to music? The white man simply cannot combine your undying optimism despite terrible oppression with confidence in God as expressed in the Negro melodies. Therefore, I say, America needs the Negro and bids you stand firm. If you surrender, America is poorer, but you cannot surrender."

Friday the Women's Auxiliaries met and the prize babies were presented; while in the afternoon The Crisis had a session. Friday night, with Dr. George W. Lucas of New Orleans presiding, William Pickens talked of the economic interpretation of race problems:

his own biscuit in the hotel dining room is more of an annoyance to the average white American than is the soiled and sweating Negro back in the hotel kitchen, who is actually handling every-body's biscuits. The ruling caste in Mississippi makes passionate speeches and drastic laws against any legitimate and honorable mixing of the blood of the two races, but produces a hundred thousand mulattoes by illegitimate contacts. Negro maids may arrange a white woman's hair, brush her teeth and suckle her babies, but may not sit on the far end of a long pew in her church.

"These seeming inconsistencies no longer puzzle us when we apply the law to them: for Negro slaves, Negro cooks, and other Negro servants represent economic subjection; while the Negro freeman, the Negro hotel guest and even the Negro sister-in-the-Lord, if in the same pew, represent economic equality."

On Saturday, we rode and played and danced; and Sunday, representatives of the conference talked in twenty-two white and colored churches. Sunday afternoon came the great mass meeting, and the singing of Florence Cole Talbert. The Governor of California was there, and James Weldon Johnson and Robert W. Bagnall spoke. Arthur P. Spingarn said:

"We invite a comparison of the self-styled patriotic groups which have recently set themselves up as arbiters of Americanism and have seen fit to find this organization wanting, with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Has any of these groups a constructive program which will bring about the safety of the individual, larger opportunity for education and training in true Americanism, the carrying out of the principles of the Constitution of the United States, the increase of the wealth of the submerged and the making of a richer life for all citizens?"

Monday morning was the day of the Junior Division and the Branches came in again to discuss organization in the afternoon. Monday night Lew Head talked of the colored races:

"Civilization will reach its highest achievements when the brown races of the world have first, conceived the need of consecrated leadership, second, sponsored those leaders and third, through them energized an improved civilization on this earth. There is a power in the colored people of the United States that either has not been discovered or, if discovered, has not been harnessed for practical use.

"The present civilization has about spent itself. Humanity is on the verge of a tremendous crisis. Just what direction the march of human progress is to take, is now back where it was when civilization started, waiting for responsible, intelligent and consecrated leadership. It is not beyond belief that out of the brown races of the world, over half of its population, will come this leadership."

And Lincoln Steffens discussed democracy:

"The radicals are the only friends of the colored people, just as these 'disreputable' radicals are the only friends of women, of labor, of farmers, of all the minorities. These minorities, by the way, could be a majority if they would play the game, first alone, then together. For most people belong to some minority."

Bishop Martin talked of social conditions:

"Go into many of our towns and you might lay down the rule that where the pavement ends there the blacks begin. Now this is not of our own choosing but is the result of conditions forced upon us. Restricted districts, prohibitive purchase price for houses, exorbitant rents, threats and abuse, are only some of the means employed for adding insult to our already sorely injured group."

Our Negro "Intellectuals"

By ALLISON DAVIS

FOR nearly ten years, our Negro writers have been "confessing" the distinctive sordidness and triviality of Negro life, and making an exhibition of their own unhealthy imagination, in the name of frankness and sincerity. Frankness is no virtue in itself, however, as any father will tell his son, nor is sincerity. A dog or savage is "sincere" about his bestialities, but he is not therefore raised above them. The modern novel has been frankly and sincerely preoccupied with sex, but has not escaped an insane naturalism. It is a question, then, of the purpose for which one is being sincere. It is quite evident that the sincerity of Milton, of Fielding, and of Dr. Johnson is different in kind from the sincerity of Mr. D. H. Lawrence and Mr. James Joyce. If sincerity is to justify one in exploiting the lowest traits of human nature, and in ignoring that sense in man which Cicero says differentiates him from other animals,-his sense for what is decent-then sincerity is a pander to a torpid animalism.

The plea of sincerity, of war against hypocrisy and sham, therefore, is no defence for the exhibitionism of Mr. George S. Schuyler and Mr. Eugene Gordon, nor for the sensationalism of such works as Dr. Rudolph Fisher's HIGH YALLER or Mr. Langston Hughes' FINE CLOTHES TO THE JEW. The first two writers by their coarse frivolousness and scandalmongering falsely represent that the Negro has no self-respect. A bawling confession from the house-tops is a poor substitute for honest and discriminating self-examination, in race criticism as in religion. Mr. Schuyler and Mr. Gordon may be clever intellectual gymnasts; as such they belong with the vaudeville, and not with the men who set new currents of thought moving in Negro life. Of our Menckenites, however, more later; let us first include in our view those who ought to be termed our Van Vechtenites. Mr. Van Vechten is not responsible for the beginning of our literary effort to appear primitive, but he brought the movement to its complete fruition, and gave it the distinction of his patronage.

UR writers started almost ten years ago to capitalize the sensational and sordid in Negro life, notably in Harlem, by making it appear that Negro life is distinctive for its flaming "color", its crude and primi-tive emotion. This facile acceptance of the old, romantic delusion of "racial literatures", which goes back beyond Taine all the way to Mme. de Stael, was a convenient mould for the energies of writers who had no tradition to guide them in treating Negro themes. What was more to the point, it interested the sophisticated reading public, at the height of the "jazz age following the war, because it seemed to bring fresh and primitive forces to a jaded age.

These young writers hit upon two means of injecting primitivistic color in their work; one, the use of the Harlem cabaret and night life, and the other, a return to the African jungles. Since Mr. MacKay's HARLEM DANCER, the cabaret has been an unhealthy obsession with these youths, who in their relative naïveté imagine that there is something profoundly stirring about the degradation of its habitués. Even the best writers, Mr. McKay, Mr. Cullen, Mr. Hughes, and Dr. Fisher, as well as many of their less gifted imitators, have exploited the cabaret. The jazz band became the model which the Negro poet sought to imitate. It is particularly unfortunate that Mr. James Weldon Johnson should yield to this jazzy primitivism in choosing the title GOD'S TROMBONES for a work purporting to represent the Negro's religious fervor. Of course here, as always, the Negro movement must be seen in relation to the broader current of American literature. Mr. Waldo Frank, Mr. Scott Fitzgerald, and a host of other white authors were at the same time popularizing the jazz complex. In illustration, moreover, Mr. Miguel Covarrubias and Mr. Winold Reiss did more than Mr. Aaron Douglas and Mr. Richard Bruce to represent the Negro as essentially bestialized by jazz and the cabaca th

N this mad rush to make the Negro exhibit his sensational and primitivistic qualities, our young writers did not lack white support. Mr. Carl Van Doren encouraged them in this fashion: "But if the reality of Negro life is itself dramatic, there are of course still other elements, particularly the emotional power with which Negroes live or at least to me seem to live. What American literature decidedly needs at the moment is color, music, gusto, the free expression of gay or desperate moods. If the Negroes are not in a position to contribute these items, I do not know what Americans are." Mr. Max Rheinhardt spoke of the necessity for the Negro dramatist's remaining true to the original spontaneity of his race by portraying "pure emotion, almost independent of words or setting". This myth of the spiritual and artistic virtue of spontaneous emotion in the Negro was enthusiastically supported by Mr. Carl Van Vechten. I think that the severest charge one can make against Mr. Van Vechten is that he misdirected a genuine poet, who gave promise of a power and technique exceptional in any poetry, — Mr. Hughes. Mr. Van Vechten disclaims any influence upon Mr. Hughes' first book, THE WEARY BLUES, for which he wrote a preface expressing undiluted primitivism. The evident reply is that the drop from the best poems of this first book to any of those in FINE CLOTHES TO THE IEW, which Mr. Van Vechten undoubtedly did influence, is the real proof of his having finally misdirected Mr. Hughes.

CRISIS

NOW came the devastating result of the primitivism which our Negro writers had concocted and made a holy cause. NIGGER HEAVEN was the telos, the perfect flowering of the "cabaret school". By means of the same sensational primitivism and the creation of half a dozen cabarets which Harlem could never boast, Mr. Van Vechten warped Negro life into a fan-tastic barbarism. What was most pernicious in NIGGER HEAVEN was the representation that the Negro upper class is identical with the pleasureseekers and cabaret-rounders. NIG-GER HEAVEN was the logical outcome of the forces our "intellectuals" had championed for five years, and in a very real sense these "intellectuals" were responsible for its writing and its success. With its appearance there arose in the minds of many Negro writers and readers some doubt concerning the whole movement toward "color" and exhibitionism. The most prominent writers, however, could not evade the natural result of their own practice, and defended Mr. Van Vechten on the ground of artistic sincerity, for which they found proof chiefly in his mixing socially with Negroes. Here again the pretense of sincerity justified the most unalleviated sensationalism. In fact, the total effect of the whole movement was that Negroes are sincerely bestial.

An atavistic yearning for the African jungles, which was entirely simulated, was the second device of these poets for adding "color" to the Negro. The desire of young poets to "dance naked under palm trees", and to express themselves in jungle loves has been the favorite device for making poetry authentically Negroid. Tomtoms, love-dances, strange passions and savage urges have been the paraphernalia of almost every budding poetaster. Even Mr. Cullen made especial use of the jungle urge in his early and best known poems, HERITAGE and THE SHROUD OF COLOR. This whole primitivistic interpretation of the Negro is the white man's facile point of view, and our Negro "intel-lectuals" wanted to appear as the white man would have them. The most important assertion of the related primitivism of cabaret and jungle is the work of a white poet, Mr. Lindsay's CONGO. There is nothing more foreign to the Negro's imagination than this yearning for savage Africa, and it is a false note every time it is struck by a Negro poet. The African tradition which we want to uncover and make fruitful is certainly not that of savagery, but of self-containment, fortitude, and culture.

At times the poets achieved something beautiful and significant in spite of their material and creed. Mr. McKay's poem, HARLEM SHADOWS touches on nobility and a higher imaginative view than most American realistic poetry ever reaches. The title poem of Mr. Hughes' THE WEARY BLUES created a representative symbol for the frustration and inertia into which Negro life is penned. There were poems in McKay, Cullen, and Hughes which gave evidence of a higher understanding of Negro life, but this quality of their imagination was not developed. Mr. Hughes especially chose to exploit the meretricious themes of jazz, instead of developing the powers shown in such poems as AUNT SUE'S STORIES and WHEN SUE WEARS RED. The indubitable gift of Mr. Hughes and of one or two other poets was sacrificed to a dogma, which necessitated their being atavistic and "colorful" at the expense of a full and experimental development of their imagination. The untrammeled self-expression which the supporters of the movement claimed for it was actually freedom only to be as primitivistic as one liked. There was no freedom from the creed that a Negro poet ought to be barbaric.

OUR primitivistic poets and storytellers have been ousted from the stage lately by a rising group of young critics, writing for magazines and Negro newspapers. They are Menckenites, largely inspired by their master's attack upon Negro preachers and "misleaders", and his heralding of the self-critical Negro. Now the genuine critic is the individual who can fix upon the excellent and significant in the welter of all that is obvious and passing, and who can reveal how this seed may be made fruitful. Even though he must expose what is trivial or pernicious, he moves from a perception of what is true. Such a critic will illustrate his higher standards by the point from which he attacks false standards. His criticism, then, is vital, even in the act of denying. We do not look to him for reform and solutions, but we do expect him to give currency to real and high principles. In applying these standards with an esprit de finesse to the ever shifting flux of the energies which make for chaos, he will give perspective to the so-called "men of action"

A vital grasp upon standards, then, and the ability to apply them flexibly to the "gushing forth of novelties" (Will you please turn to page 284)

THE CONTINUING SONG

HE Indus, published by Indian students in London, has an article by "an Indian" on Florence Mills:

"The true artist has the world for a pedestal; the adventurer, after years of travel has nothing broader than his shoes." So says a great writer. It is So says a great writer. It is examplified to-day in the sadness that prevails over the loss of Florence Mills. Born in humble surroundings and belonging to the coloured peoples that are usually despised, she worked her way up against tremendous odds, and won for herself, at the early age of twenty-six, a sacred place in the hearts of the peoples, coloured and white alike. Hers was a genius that had bridged over differences and worn down prejudices that had stood for generations. Her art had no limitations. Its appeal was as universal as life.

Many that had come to sneer had stayed to cheer. She captivated the most indifferent with the charm of her manner and her naturalness. The exacting critic found himself swept off his feet with her irresistible personality and felt nothing but praise for the artist. Her voice of pure silver with a ring of pathos in it penetrated into the unfeeling, and stirred the depths that had hitherto not come to light, and her smile lit the faces of the cheerless with its own brightness—the brightness of unshed

In spite of her invariable success, she never forgot that she belonged to a race who is looked down upon, and that her mission in life was to elevate it in the opinion of the world. She set herself voluntarily this great duty with the conviction that comes with a great truth and with the courage of a great right. She made her ideal the betterment of the coloured race. Her self-respect and dignity made her regret the lack of that footing of equality, which is the only means by which true fellowship and sociability can exist.

The medium by which she sought to establish this amity was her own art. Art in itself has no narrowness of vision and outlook. To delight an audience in face of opposition, expressed or unexpressed, is a gift that falls to few. Her work and her art went side by side. In her, her mission had found a harbinger of peace and good-will essential for the breaking down of age-long preconceptions; and from her, her co-workers will derive a new force and spirit to animate their future activities. They can face the difficult task ahead with the noble example before them. Their success may be a long time to come, but the way has been paved to many a success by the sacrifices made by such ardent and devoted workers like her. Her sympathy will be a continual solace to the suf-ferers in the cause. Well she might have sung, with our nIdian poet:-

"My last gift to you will be a tear dropped into the depth of your youth; it will make your smile all the sweeter, and bemist your outlook on the pitiless mirth of day."

nouncements carefully. If you have further specific questions, write the Editor.

THE NEGRO VOTER

CCORDING to the Census of A 1920, there were in the United States 60,886,520 persons twenty-one years of age and over. Of these 5,522,-475, or a little over 9 per cent were Negroes. Of these Negroes, 1,512,987 were illiterate, leaving a possible Negro voting population of sufficient intelligence to read and write of over 4,000,000. Disfranchisement cuts this figure considerably. Neither whites nor Negroes in the District of Columbia vote. In Virginia, North Carolina, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, there is a considerable Negro vote cast for presidential candidates, but Negro votes are not effective so far as Congressmen are concerned. In South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, nine-tenths of the Negroes are disfranchised. The possible Negro vote in these states is 2,722,048. This left in 1920, 2,800,427 possible Negro voters in the United States.

Since that time, the Negro population has increased and the migration from South to North has transferred a considerable number of Negroes from disfranchisement to a territory where they can vote. It will, therefore, be possible for at least 3,000,000 and possibly three and a quarter million of Negroes to vote in the next presidential election.

These voters will be distributed roughly as follows:

In the New England States, there will be 60,000 colored voters, out of a total vote of 4,500,000. In the Middle Atlantic States, there will be 500,000 colored voters, out of a possible 13,-500,000. In the East North Central States, there will be 450,000 colored voters, out of a possible 13,000,000. In the West North Central States, 200,-000 colored voters, out of a possible 7,250,000. In the South Atlantic States, the Negro voters will be in-effective except in Delaware, Mary-iand and West Virginia, where they will cast 250,000 votes, out of a possible 1,750,000. In the Mountain and Pacific States, Negroes will cast perhaps 75,000 votes, out of a possible 5,500,000.

To this must be added two considerations: first of all, all persons, twentyone years of age and over in the United States for various reasons, do not vote. In the Presidential Election of 1920, only 26,674,171 votes were cast, out of the possible 60,886,520. If the Negro voter is alert, he may, therefore, cast even more than one-tenth of the actual vote, despite disfranchisement in the South. Certainly, in many of the states intelligent use of the Negro vote can bring results.

We may assume that in 1928, the total vote cast in the following states and the Negro vote will be something as follows:

POSSIBLE VOTES, 1928

		Total Negro

This, of course, will only be true in case the Negro attends to his election duties with unusual assiduity,-that is, votes even more largely than the white. That he ought to do this arises from his peculiar position. In every single one of these states, the Negro vote is important.

Even in New England, while it forms only two or three per cent of the total vote, nevertheless, it is concentrated in certain strategic centers, like Boston, Providence and New Haven, where it will effect the congressional vote; and with Smith as the Democratic candidate the fight between Protestants and Catholics is going to be so close that the black voters will be needed.

In the industrial East, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the Negro can cast 425,000 out of 6,500,000 votes. This is between six and seven per cent, and that is a very important bloc. The fight in the East is a fight between organized wealth and industry, on the one hand, and organized labor and radical reform on the other. The issues will be clouded. Smith is no enemy to organized wealth, and Hoover is no friend of organized labor. It will be hard for these elements in many cases to choose between the two leaders. They will have, however, no such difficulty of choice in voting for congressmen and the issues will often be clear-cut and the Negro vote of large importance.

In the Middle West, out of a total of 7,000,000 votes, the Negro should have at least 350,000, or 5 per cent. Wisely used, this means the balance of power, not only in the Presidential Election but in the election of congressmen; because the fight in the Middle West over the issues of liquor, Catholicism, the farmer, labor and industry, is going to be fierce.

The farm issue will, of course, be emphasized in Iowa, Missouri, Ne-braska and Kansas. Here again the Negro will have 7 per cent of the vote and he ought to use every ounce of his power to the greatest advantage.

The Southern Border States present, of course, the usual anomaly. In Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, out of a vote of about 2,225,000, Negroes should cast 25 per cent. This is enough to control the election; but the Negro vote in these states has for a long time been shamelessly manipulated. There is not only open bribery and economic intimidation, but there is the prevailing problem of what the Negro can cast his vote for if he bolts the Republican Party. He dare not vote for the Democrats when the Democrats act as they have recently in Tennessee and he can hardly with self-respect vote with the Republicans of Kentucky. Certainly in Delaware and Maryland the Negro can afford to vote for the local Democratic Ticket in many cases. The results of doing this in the past have proven its wisdom; but it is worth careful thought and prolonged negotiation.

All things considered in the election of 1928, the Negro voter has the greatest chance for intelligent and purposeful independence than has come to him in a generation.

(In future numbers we shall discuss: the effect of disfranchisement in the South; the presidential candidates; the congressional candidates and the issues at stake in the campaign.)

THE FOURTEENTH SPIN-GARN MEDAL

THE Fourteenth Spingarn Medal has been awarded to Charles Waddell Chesnutt of Cleveland, Ohio, "In recognition of his pioneer work as literary artist depicting the life and struggle of Americans of Negro descent, and for his long and useful career as scholar, worker and free-man of one of America's greatest cities".

The Spingarn Medal was established by Joel E. Spingarn in 1914 and is awarded annually "for the highest or noblest achievement by an American Negro during the proceeding year or years".

It is no easy task to interpret and carry out the spirit of this distinguished award. If the Committee should emphasize the achievement of a single year they would be in grave danger of rewarding an exceptional and accidental deed, popular and notable at the time, but of no lasting importance and giving no real indication of character and ability. On the other hand, if the Committee should establish the custom of awarding this medal simply for the rounding out of a long and honorable career, it would again miss the real object which is to herald distinguished accomplishment, rather than desert or length of days.

In awarding this medal to Mr. Chesnutt this year, the Committee has had in mind a singular fact: it is not simply true that Mr. Chesnutt has done distinguished work in past years, but it is singularly true that that work today and this year is being recognized as of prime importance in the renaissance of American Negro literature. Perhaps no single man could be picked out who is more worthy to be called the Dean of the young black artists who are writing today. This was one reason for the award, and in addition, the Committee had in mind Mr. Chesnutt's personality, his artistic detachment, his humor and good-nature, the high regard in which he is held by his fellow citizens of Cleveland, white and black, his interest in every civic movement, which makes for the betterment of men. For these reasons it seems THE CRISIS that the Spingarn Medal has seldom, if ever, been more fittingly awarded.

THE CONFERENCE

T may seem overstatement when we say from year to year that each Conference of the N. A. A. C. P. overtops the last. It is, of course, impossible that each Conference should surpass the others in every respect. But in certain ways every succeeding Conference sets a new mark: there was the great mass meeting of 10,000 at Indianapolis; the Spingarn Medal night at Chicago; and the Academy of Music meeting at Philadelphia.

But Los Angeles rose to new heights -the reception at the decorated depot; the lovely blue and gold of the weather with blossoming flower and fruit; the presence of public officials of city and state; the throwing open of 22 leading churches to our speakers; the great meeting at the Shrine and Philharmonic and above all-the Hotel, Somerville! Never before in the history of black America has so beautiful and complete a hostelry, owned and conducted by black folk, been opened, equipped and presented to the world in six months for a great national convention. There is nothing like it in the United States among our people and white hotels surpass it only in size.

PHOTOGRAPHS

N this year's grand commencement procession of Negro graduates of colleges, we have the remarkable total of 1617 men and women. It would be a delightful privilege for us to publish all of their photographs, but such an undertaking would not be practical even if we devoted every square inch of our thirty-six page magazine to photographs. Consequently we are publishing only the following photographs:

Recipients of higher academic degrees. Valedictorians and salutatorians of Negro colleges.

Students in northern colleges who have earned the Phi Beta Kappa key, scholarships or other distinctions during their college course. Athletes who have made notable records.

Recipients of professional degrees in medicine, dentistry, etc., who have won especial distinction.

On this account we extend our sincere congratulation to all persons receiving the Bachelor's degree and professional degrees in ordinary course and to all high school graduates, and ask their pardon for omitting their pictures.

MANNING

OSEPH C. MANNING is a very sick man. Colored people should remember him. He is a white man from Alabama who represents the insurgent South-those who do not believe that all political activity begins and ends in the South. He was among those who tried triumphantly, twentyfive years ago, to establish popularism in Alabama, in Arkansas and in Texas. If there had been a Republican form of government in those states, the Third Party movement would have triumphed. But although triumphing at the polls, the white men were counted out by the same methods in use against Negroes, and the South sank to those present conditions of political lethargy. Those who want to hear a part of the story of this movement should read Mr. Manning's book, "The Fade-Out of Popularism".

PROPAGANDA IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

ACE prejudice is easily made indistinctive in the Barrington High School, New York City. The teacher in a history class talked about John Brown. It was a shame that he was called a martyr. She could not understand how anyone could regard him as aught but a riotous law breaker.

In a Flushing High School the teacher announced that there were no Negro soldiers in the Civil War. One colored boy ventured to remind her that there were 200,000. He was told that it was not so.

In a Queens Grammar School, the teacher had never heard of Frederick Douglass, but she allowed a colored student to write an essay on it, and was rather astonished at what she learned.

bers of the colored race. In fact, some of them have been very popular in college-one I especially remember who was a member of our baseball team and was liked by everybody. The two boys in college I find on intimate terms with their fellows.'

Wellesley adds this:

"We are, of course, very careful to avoid dormitory complications by giving these students single rooms. We are also careful in assigning to tables to avoid anything which would make an unhappy situation for these students, since, as you know, some southern girls might object. It has happened more than once that either a member of the faculty or a senior in charge of a table in a college dormitory has asked that a certain Negro student be assigned to her table."

Cornell makes no official declaration but a colored student there writes as follows:

"There is no law preventing race students from entering the Cornell Medical School in New York, but it is an extremely difficult proposition for them to matriculate there; and Negro women students are not prohibited from living in the girls' dormitories, but it is always impossible for them to secure a room in the same as it is claimed that their applications have not been filed early enough. They are usually grouped together with a Negro family and where they have been placed for the last few years has worked many hardships upon them because they are at a great distance from the University, and during the winter when deep snows prevail the trolley service becomes disrupted thereby making it necessary for them to plod many miles through intense cold and heavy snows."

ANY institutions are doing se-M cretly what Butler University has done openly. That is, admit only a certain number or proportion of colored students. Butler writes:

'We admit ten Negro students each year on the basis of scholarship and character."

Kansas State Agricultural College: "Our policy toward Negro students has always been to give them the benefit of the best that we have in class room instruction, and opportunity to develop to the best of their ability. The training which they receive here enables them to go out and do a really serviceable work among their own people, and to assume positions of leadership. We shall con-tinue along these lines."

Miss Nannie H. Burroughs Author and Publisher WASHINGTON, 9. & LINCOLN HEIGHTS

"In spite of inexperience and in spite of ignorance of the technique of government, handicaps which have wrecked far abler officials, the Negro gave to the South in a few short years the fundamentals of American democracy. He wrote into the organic law provisions for a free ballot and free public schools. He reformed the judicial and penal code and made the beginnings of state institutions for the care of the unfortunate. He even made free labor and wages respectable. Some day history will correctly appraise the Negro's first opportunity and effort and some day even a grudging South will admit the merit of these outstanding accomplishments—a program of achievements worthy of the highest praise in any democratic government.

"Today we observe an appreciable tendency toward the restoration of the Negro in public life. He is gradually securing not a dominating, but a representative place in public service."

The address to the country, drawn up by the committee of which Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois was Chairman, was as follows:

"The year of the Presidential Election brings forcibly to the mind of every American, white and black, the insistent problem of Democratic Government in the United States. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in its 19th Annual Conference reiterates its charge that the disfrancisement of the majority of intelligent adult Negroes in the United States is not simply a race problem, it is a problem of Democracy and it affects the entire nation and the whole world.

If Democracy is discredited and sneered at today, it is very largely because of its partial failure in the United States. We are today dominated openly by selfish private interests, rather than by free and intelligent public opinion; and this is in no small measure because the disfranchisement of 3,750,000 black voters in the South has involved the disfranchisement of more than 5 million Southern white voters. Despite an increase of 100 per cent in the voting population of 11 Southern states, and despite the 19th Amendment, we face the astonishing fact that in the last forty years the voting population there has increased only 50 per cent and in the Southern South, there has been practically no in-crease in the number of voters in a gen-

CRISIS

These facts, together with the disfranchisement of the foreign-born in New England, and the gerrymandering of congressional districts elsewhere, give the astonishing result that a million voters can elect 45 Congressmen in the South and 16 in New England, but only 13 in the Middle West and 12 on the Pacific Coast.

Facts such as these are ruining the interest of Americans in elections all over the United States. Ordinarily, scarcely one eligible American voter out of three goes to the polls, and the number of citizens 21 years of age and over who did not vote in the last election, reached 90 per cent in two states; 70 to 90 per Thus, Democratic Government in the United States has become a farce, primarily because for the sake of disfranchising black men, white America has been willing to distranchise itself.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in this year of the Presidential Election calls on the nation for a new faith in Democracy without regard to race or color. The American ballot must be re-established on a real basis of intelligence and character. Only in such way can this nation face the tremendous problems before it: the problem of free speech, an unsubsidized press, and civil liberty for all people; the problem of imperialism and the emancipation of Haiti, Nicaragua, Cuba, the Philippines and Hawaii from the Government of American Banks; the overshadowing problem of peace among the nations and of decent and intelligent cooperation in the real advancement of the natives of Africa and Asia, together with freedom for China, India and Egypt.

If we need the power of intelligent democracy for these broader matters, we need it all the more here in our own land and for the specific hurts of the population that this Association especially represents.

For the first time in a generation there has passed in the United States one period of one hundred and twenty days when a human being has not been lynched by a mob. The gratification of recording such a fact only increases the sense of utter shame that a great modern nation must needs rejoice at so elementary an exhibition of decency. If lynching can be stopped for four months, it can be stopped for four years. If it can be lessened by local initiative, it can and should be wiped out by national enactment. is clear from seven recent mob murders that lynching still needs to be stopped. A Federal Anti-Lynching Law should write into the statutes of the nation the determination of America to put down mob

Disfrancisement and segregation, race hatred and war, all are steps toward the same degeneracy. We have driven official residential segregation out from the protection of the law; but it continues to be common in real estate manipulation and by voluntary agreement. Segregation by race of American citizens is still practiced and persisted in the departments of the Federal Government at Washington. It is due to our unremitting effort that this open defiance of the constitution is less general. Whatever political power we have, should be used to continue the fight until no vestige of this abuse remains.

E CRISIS

A recent document published in the Congressional Record shows that the states which have separate schools for Negroes have only 3,000 college students, where they ought to have 37,000 and receive only $2,300,000 a year from State and National funds, when they ought to receive twelve millions. This is illegal and unconstitutional and socially suicidal. It must be remedied and we must remedy it by every means in our power and especially by ballots and by court action.

Our economic situation is still precarious and deplorable. We have more difficulty than white folk in securing decent work and we are paid less for the same jobs. We denounce the secret enmity toward black workers which is still manifested by those American trade unions which acquiesce in discrimination toward them and in opposition to their membership and employment. We should refuse to use our political power to advance the cause of white unionism when it stands for color discrimination. rejoice at the continued growth and development of Negro culture, art and literature. Despite efforts within and without the race to prostitute beauty to filth and defeatism, we are still objects of petty public insult, coupled with economic theft. In time of public calamity, like the Mississippi flood, we are treated in many instances like slaves and criminals. We still lack the right to enter many places of public accom-modation, and especially we continue to pay railroads in the South for accommodations which we do not receive. These public carriers, even in interstate traffic, enforce a species of discrimination so outrageous and so obviously illegal as to call for immediate redress before the courts. Our great weapon of offense against all this is the ballot. We must not give it up. We must register and vote whenever and wherever we can. We must not mortgage our vote to faithless and corrupt political organizations. We must demand in return for our political allegiance, education, decent home surroundings, public protection and na-tional respect. Behind that ballot and fighting for it stands the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. No American, black or white, does his full duty who does not support its policies and its work.

We hail and greet our friends, North and South, black and white, whose liberal thought in word and deed, in platform, newspaper, classroom, book and press, is forwarding the day of our complete emancipation."

which is the other side of life are the qualifications of the critic. Our Negro "intellectuals" have tried to substitute a display of their own and the race's eccentricities for these virtues. Mr. Schuyler and Mr. Gordon are likely to become the forerunners of a line of young critics, who will pose as the thoughtful and emancipated Negro. They will pretend to represent a positivistic and experimental attitude toward the Negro's situation, to replace the religious fatalism and inferiority complex of our older leaders. It is precisely this specious liberalism in our little Menchenites, which makes them dangerous. The Negro to-day is at a critical and strategic point of transition, where the cry of intellectual emancipation will lead him after false lights, unless he is willing to be thoroughly critical. We must avoid the recurrent, human tendency to exchange one extreme for another. Complete trust of all that parades as intelligence, and an effort to be hypercritical are not the proper cure for an inferiority complex. Smartness and a superficial cynicism are not substitutes for reflection and vision.

M R. SCHUYLER and Mr. Gor-don are interested only in expressing themselves, their cleverness without taste, their radicalism without intelligence, their contempt for Negro leaders and our upper class, uninformed by serious principles. The most obvious fact concerning Mr. Schuyler's articles is their coarse flippancy which he no doubt means to be a protective hardening for the sensitiveness and race-consciousness of Negroes. But to become hardened to such terms as "smoke", "Ziggaboo", "crow", "dinge", "shine", or to take refuge in thumbing one's nose by hurling back "cracker", "peckerwood", and "hill-billy", is not to gain stoical strength, but to lose self-respect. The qualities which have kept the Negro's spirit unbroken are a gift for irony of a broader kind, and an everlasting for-

Reflection and contemplation, alone, can insure the critic's virtues of perspective and balance. Reflection is made evident by one's discrimination, one's power of making vital distinctions. What Mr. Schuyler, Mr. Gordon, and their school, as well as Mr. Mencken, lack, is just this faculty of discriminating judgment. Mr. Schuyler especially reveals his lack of all standards in his frivolous and universal cynicism. In his indiscriminate

Mr.

M. GORDON'S innocence of any standards and his intellectual confusion are illustrated by his naive theory that the tradition which the Negro wants to preserve is that of the black-face minstrel and the Stephen Foster folk. THE NEGRO'S IN-HIBITIONS, so far as it is at all honest and serious, is an unconscious reductio ad absurdum of the primitivis-tic creed. The Negro is to treasure his eccentricities simply because they are spontaneous and differentiate him from the white man! If Mr. Gordon had any real perception he would have found ideals based upon the character of the Negro which distinguish him from the white man in a more fundamental sense. The qualities which have moulded the Negro are not emotional crudeness and colorful spontaneity; they are fortitude, an oriental spirituality and unworldliness, and a faculty of laughing at any tendency towards selfpity, which more than anything human approaches the laughter of Mr. O'Neil's Lazarus!

WITHOUT intelligent standards, then, our Menckenites still insist upon expressing themselves. What they really set up for our improvement, in the place of standards, is their own personality. The virtue of their writing they believe to lie in the brilliance and iconoclastic smartness with which they demolish what is obviously ignorant and mean. Every man or movement treated is warped and caricatured by the necessity for displaying their own temperament. Mr. Schuyler expresses his fantastic misconception of the affluence recently acquired by Negro writers, in this fashion: "the black scribblers, along with the race orators, are now wallowing in the luxury of four-room apartments, expensive radios, Chickering pianos, Bond Street habiliments, canvas-back duck, pre-war Scotch, and high yallow mistresses". And Mr. Schuyler is "wallowing" in his own temperament! Similarly Mr. Gordon's representation that most Negroes are blind apes of everything in the white world is only a reflection of his individual desire to pose before the white public. So long as we have had romantic confessionalists, we have been acquainted with those who desire "to publish themselves", in Emerson's phrase; but when they set themselves up as serious critics, they become public dangers.

OUR "intellectuals", then, both those in literature and those in race criticism, have capitalized the sensational aspects of Negro life, at the expense of general truth and sound judgment. Primitivism has carried the imagination of our poets and storytellers into the unhealthy and abnormal. A sterile cynicism has driven our Menckenized critics into smart coarseness. With regard to the primitivists, the first thing to be settled is whether our lives are to be interpreted with relation to the Negro race or the human race. Are there any traits peculiar to Negro character, and if so, are those traits especially crude emotions? It will appear, I think, that the qualities of fortitude, irony, and a relative absence of self-pity are the most important influences in the lives of Negroes, and that these qualities are the secret strength of that part of us which is one with a universal human nature. Our poets and writers of fiction have failed to interpret this broader human nature in Negroes, and found it relatively easy to disguise their lack of a higher imagination by concentrating upon immediate and crude emotions.

UR critic "intellectuals" also lack this quality of elevation. Mr. Schuyler, Mr. Gordon, and their imitators, (at two removes from Mr. Mencken!) are preoccupied with the sordid and trivial aspects of Negro life. On the whole, the facts of Negro life are sordid; they have been so for three hundred years, as a result of slavery, and will very likely remain so for sometime to come. We are going on our grit, and it is these higher secret powers which I have indicated, (call them spiritual or chemical, as you like) which we must preserve and apply intelligently to our future development. Self-respect is vital if we are to retain our courage, and self-respect is precisely the quality which these critics lack. "Such conceits as clownage keeps in pay" are their qualifications, and the Negro has had enough clowning,from his leaders down. I have already defined the true critic as the individual who holds fast to his perception of what is excellent and real, in the midst of appearances, and who applies his standards with discrimination to the flux of actual life. The genuinely qualified crtics of Negro life will fix upon the inner strength of Negro character as illustrated in the last three hundred years, and, discounting the trivial and irrelevant, will reinterpret these persistent characteristics for the new Negro to whom he will be as an eye.
